

Singapore learning weekend

Fictional teaching material - not real bookings or travel advice.

Arrival and the meeting point

This fictional teaching itinerary is for four students spending four days in Singapore. The group meets at the fictional Lantern Desk in the hotel lobby at 09:15 on day one. The booking reference is SG-STUDY-204. Maya is the group coordinator. Anyone delayed should wait at the desk rather than travel alone to the first activity.

The group sets aside SGD 48 per person per day for meals and local transport: SGD 30 for meals and SGD 18 for transport. Accommodation and flights are outside this allowance. Across four days the allowance totals SGD 192 per person, or SGD 768 for four students.

Practice question

Which exact names, numbers and reference codes appear in this section?

Singapore learning weekend

Fictional teaching material - not real bookings or travel advice.

Culture, food and a rainy-day alternative

Day one is a neighborhood orientation. Day two focuses on a food-market observation exercise, with students recording ingredients, prices and preparation techniques. Day three includes a waterfront sketching walk. Day four is reserved for comparing notes and preparing a short presentation. These are classroom scenarios, not confirmed bookings.

If rain interrupts the waterfront walk, the group moves to the fictional Harbour Learning Room at 14:00 for a diagram-reading workshop. The indoor session lasts 90 minutes. Students should bring notebooks and download their sample documents before arriving. The workshop reference is RAIN-90.

Practice question

How does this section connect to the previous section?

Singapore learning weekend

Fictional teaching material - not real bookings or travel advice.

Accessibility and the final presentation

The fictional route has a seated break after every 45 minutes of walking. The coordinator checks step-free access before each stop. Students can request an indoor alternative without completing the outdoor route. No medical or accessibility guarantee is implied by this invented scenario.

Each pair prepares a five-minute presentation with three observations, two supporting quotations from their notes, and one unanswered question. The final meeting begins at 16:30 on day four in the Lantern Room. The presentation folder is named Singapore Evidence Pack.

Practice question

What information is missing, and how should an assistant respond?